The Community Mortgage Movement Raises $10,000 for Local London Charities and Organizations, in 2016

The Community Mortgage Movement, in its first 12 months of operation, raised over $10,000 for the London Community. Founded in November 2015 by Andrew Young from Mortgage Wise Financial, The Community Mortgage Movement is a social innovation concept that allows its clients to give-back to the community of London - with every deal that the Community Mortgage Movement funds, a donation is made to specific London charities and community organizations, focusing on five major categories: health; social services; education; children; and the environment.

With the funds raised in 2016, the Community Mortgage Movement was able to assist in funding a program that teaches people with literacy issues, computer skills, as well as helps them with crafting a resume and searching for a job. In addition, they were able to help a local Family Crisis Centre supply beds for respite care, and purchase much-needed supplies for an animal rescue organization.

Due to the quick success of the Community Mortgage Movement, Andrew Young was able to establish an endowment fund with the London Community Foundation to ensure that CMM would be able to give back to the London community, now, and in perpetuity. They are focused on growing a sustainable funding source for local charities, not-for-profit organization, groups, and community initiatives.

About the Community Mortgage Movement

The Community Mortgage Movement is a cooperative approach to supporting the community while delivering the best financing options and service to our valued clients. Every time someone chooses Community Mortgage Movement, a portion of their commission is put into an endowment fund that gives back to the London Community. www.communitymortgagemovement.com
